Jordi Lafon is exhibiting at the El Quadern Robat gallery

It shows a selection of pieces that reflect people's relationship with objects

L'Antiga Esquerra de l'Eixample | Barcelona
July 20, 2017

1-minute read Add betevé as a favorite source

Drafting
follow

Artist Jordi Lafon is exhibiting in Barcelona for the first time–at nearly 50 years of age–at the gallery El Quadern Robat. You can see a selection of pieces that he has created in the last decade, throughout which there are several constants, such as the interest in objects, the use of drawing and painting applied to materials, or the values and textures they have.

The exhibition also makes it clear that concern for social issues is equally recurrent in his work. An example is the piece that gives the exhibition its name, 'Nothing happens here', which the artist himself claims is a nod to visitors.which the artist himself claims is a nod to visitors.

Lafon explains that he always works with a pictorial will and that in his pieces there is always color and matter. Although there is also three-dimensionality in his work because he incorporates objects, the artist assures that he does not consider himself a sculptor. He says that this is a consequence of the work and not a goal.

Born in Barcelona in 1967, the artist Jordi Lafon is a cultural activist. He is a member of H. Associació per a les Arts Contemporànies de Vic, as well as the Plataforma d'Artistes de Catalunya.

btv news 73 | contemporary art

© betevé, 2017. All rights reserved.